With Summit there is no need to worry. Summit will not discolour. So you can confidently choose from the range of Summit white fascia boards or be adventurous with one of the Summit foiled colours.

Summit is an excellent system that carries the BS Kitemark and is manufactured under the quality standard ISO9001.

Why PVC?

If you are thinking about replacing your roofline it could be because it has come to the end of it's useful life or because you can't bare to think of climbing a ladder (or persuading your partner to do so) to paint it again.

Summit PVC replacement fascia boards are as tough as timber when it comes to holding up gutters and are many times better at resisting the effects of the weather.

So if you want style and value for money (while saving trees), then Summit PVC roofline boards are a natural choice.

All on Board

The main feature of your new roofline will be the fascia board and in particular the bottom edge of it.

Summit has a range of board styles. The Square boards present a very clean finish that suits most modern houses. If you fancy something more adventurous then the Ogee board may fit the bill. The Bullnose board is a very traditional unit with a classic look to it that suits many older properties. A flat board completes the range. It is ideal for the front edges of flat roofs and in situations where there is no room for a soffit board.

In all cases Summit replacement fascia boards are strong enough to take the weight of the guttering without the need for a backing board.

To Cap it All...

Will you cap over your existing roofline or replace it completely? Summit has a full range of replacement and capping boards. Replacement boards should be used where the timber fascias are showing signs of decay but capping fascias can be installed where the original timber is sound. Your installer will advise you on the best boards to fit.

Know Your Boards...

Colours to match

Most people want white but there is a growing demand for roofline in colours.

Summit has boards in Mahogany, Light Oak, Rosewood and Black. These coloured boards are covered in a tough foil that is guaranteed to keep its colour or at least 10 years.

Cladding

Cladding is a great way to cover the sides of dormer windows and to create the ceilings on large porch areas. PVC cladding has better insulation properties than timber and it will not rot or need painting. Which is why it is also a great replacement material for conventional timber cladding.

Window Boards & Skirting

Ever fancied window boards and skirting that you can wipe clean? These boards are an excellent alternative to conventional timber boards because they don't need staining or painting. Some boards are available in woodgrain colours.
